

CANADIANS ARE COMFORTABLE AT

Sandling Camp, England—They Realize the Seriousness of Their Approaching Work

An interesting letter has been received from Pte. W. T. Sawle who has been at Sandling Camp, Hythe, Kent County, England, with the 18th battalion from London, Ont. since the 26th of April. He states the Canadian second contingent is very comfortably located at the above address. Everything possible has been done to make things pleasant for the men and to keep their health good. The situation is almost ideal. Sandling lies among the hills of East Kent about two miles from the sea and the air is always fresh and bracing.

Each camp, and there are scores within a few miles, in fact all England is an armed camp, is laid out like a little town in rows of huts. A hut houses half a platoon, (30 men) and a company occupies a row or street. Each street is named after a popular officer. There are separate shacks for the wash houses, showers and kitchens. These are all of corrugated iron with brick foundations. There are two canteens on the grounds, a Y. M. C. A. tent, Salvation Army and C. of E. club houses. The rest rooms are a veritable haven of rest.

The loss of the Lusitania is keenly felt in England, but strange to say an air raid like the one at Southend the other night, which was practically harmless, seems to arouse the people more than anything else. As a matter of fact these air raids are a joke. The soldiers at the camp look for hostile air craft with about as much trepidation as they scan the skies for an approaching thunder storm.

Germany is a long way from being beaten. She is so strong in infantry, and her positions are so well fortified, that only by the most tremendous efforts on the part of the allies, can we hope to win, and it will take many, many months.

Kitchener has raised a large volunteer force, perhaps a million men, but the Germans have been able to bring up immense forces also, and we can't overlook the fact that many years of enforced service has provided her with trained men, not raw recruits, such as we were when the war began.

DESPERATE FIGHTING FOR LEMBERG HUNS BADLY TRIMMED ON DNEISTER

Six-Day Battle Results in Victory for Muscovites, Who Are Following Up Success
---Turks Expend Much Ammunition in Effort to Dislodge Allies from Positions---Italians Advance Twelve Miles North of Gorizia

London, June 23—Despite the announcement from Berlin that Lemberg has been taken, Petrograd makes very slight mention of operations there. It asserts that desperate attacks have been repulsed and 800 prisoners taken at Rawa Ruaka, 32 miles northwest of Lemberg. The Russians claim important victories on the Dneister below Nijiff, the battle lasting since the 13th. 3,500 prisoners were taken and the Cossacks are pursuing the fleeing Austrians. There were also Russian successes at Bukowina and they took 1,000 prisoners.

Innesbruck despatches confirm the report of a big Russian victory on the Dneister. Lemberg has been held by the Russians for ten months.

London, June 23—Between 7 and 8 o'clock in the evening of June 19 the Turks expended 450 high explosive shells on our left and centre trenches and were seen massing for an attack. The enemy's heart failed them and the attack denegated into a rifle fire action. At 7 o'clock one of our brigades attacked a Turkish trench but were unsuccessful and the Turks in counter attacks effected a lodgement in their lines at an awkward salient captured by us on the fourth. As the brigade was unable to retake the trench the fifth Royal Scots assisted by a company of the Worcester regiment came to their help. This attack was brilliantly carried to a successful issue. Prisoners state that they expected the bombardment with high explosives would have cleared us out altogether and were much disappointed at so little impression being made, although the trenches were much damaged. The Turkish dead are estimated at 300 in front of one bridge alone and 1,000 in all parts is accounted for.

Geneva, June 22—The Italians gained twelve miles north of Gorizia yesterday. At Plava they captured two forts and trenches. Along Isonzo the artillery duel has turned to the advantage of the Italians. The Austrians are bringing up guns from the eastern front.

London, June 23—A despatch to the Central News from Petrograd says—In the Dneister district a complete success has been attained after six days of fighting near Gadowa Wiszitia. The Russians captured over 3,000 prisoners. On the Zeleszcki front during the night of the 20th and after fierce fighting the Russians captured 2,000 prisoners.

Bloemfontein, June 22—Christian Dewet was found guilty of treason and sentenced to 6 years imprisonment with a fine also of $10,000.

Have Good Showing

Hugh Harris and Rod McCrimmon have been working on a group of claims adjoining the Rocher Debole mine on the east. It is reported that they have uncovered a very promising vein. They are continuing to work on it until they can show up the ore.

GRAND TRUNK LAKE ROUTE

Compares Favorably With Any Service in the World

Mrs. Ruth Kedzie Wood Thompson, whose travel books on Russia, Spain and other European countries are standard works, and who is now on her way to Alaska, declares that the Canadian steamships on the great lakes compare in the matter of service with any liners afloat.

In a letter to E. W. Holton, general passenger agent, Northern Navigation Co., the Grand Trunk's lake and water route between eastern and western Canada, Mrs. Thompson says, "We found the service on the S. S. Harmonic of your line, quite equal to that of the best European hotels, and the best Atlantic liners. The house-keeping is perfection and the courtesy of the officers and attendants most exceptional. We have travelled so much in every part of the world that we feel that we observe with expert eyes. This vessel impresses us as favorably as any we have been on and certainly we never had kinder attention.

Darken Vatican

Rome, June, 23—The Pope has consented to darken the Vatican as a protection against night air raids. Heavy storms have been hampering the Italian advance on Trentino and Trieste.

Nish, June 23—Serbia is concentrating a large army to invade Austrian territory.

NEW METHODS OF REDUCTION

The new processes introduced, of late, in the treatment of ores, are almost revolutionary in their results, and are rapidly displacing methods which, until very recently, were considered to be thoroughly modern and strictly up-to-date.

Take the oil flotation process, for instance, now being introduced in so many of our mining camps; and which is making it possible to successfully mill certain characters of ore which, hardly more than two years ago, could not be handled by any process known at a profit and which, added to the milling practice of dividend-paying companies, permit of a greater saving than ever before and at an operating expense so small as to be almost negligible. There is hardly a type of low-grade sulphide ore but can be successfully and economically treated by the oil flotation process, and its use in the reduction of milling ore that could be handled at a small profit by old but approved methods is resulting in a higher saving and a correspondingly greater net profit. And, the beauty of this process lies in its simplicity, the small amount of equipment required in its utilization, and its adaptability to so many varieties of ore.

Many improvements have been made of late, also, in the treatment of gold and silver ores and tailings by the cyanide process, and to such an extent that a big saving of time and expense is being recorded wherever these improved methods are being applied; while several new crushing devices have enabled the mill operator to get through a much larger tonnage at a greatly reduced cost.

As a result of these improvements in reduction methods and the advance made in milling machinery, there is hardly a producing district in the west but that should be able to treat its ore at a handsome profit, even though it be low in grade.—Salt Lake Mining Review.

Had Brilliant Career for Three Years in Gonzaga University—Was Leader in His Classes

John J. Jennings has graduated from Gonzaga University and will take a course in dentistry. John's many friends here will be interested to hear what the Daily Chronicle of Spokane has to say about this clever student and popular athlete:—

Opportunity is Knocking

The extent of the success to be achieved this year, and most probably for several years to come, depends entirely upon individual and collective effort. The period of hot air shooting with the accompanying non-productiveness has passed. A portion of the population has already realized it and have turned from the old paths to using their own hands and brains. These men, the ones who are doing something, are the men who are going to make good.

Opportunity is knocking at the door and is urging every man to do something and it is gratifying to see the progress that is being made in different quarters.

Nature has been kind indeed this year in giving one of the earliest seasons on record, and one of the most favorable. The farmer was able to work his land earlier and to get his crop in earlier. The warm sunshine, the timely and abundant rains have brought the crops along to a point where the profits can almost be estimated. Land that the scoffer said was worthless is today producing food for man and beast. Millions of other acres are crying aloud to be permitted to produce. Men who will work are wanted.

The prospector and the miner never got into the hills earlier, and it is doubtful if more gratifying results were ever secured. New veins have been found, new minerals uncovered and old veins are being worked. Ore is being mined and shipped and more ore will be mined and more properties will be operated. It looks like the best year the district has ever had in the way of production. This is because some men have answered opportunity's call and gone to work.

What will be the reward for the workers? Great demand for their produce; higher prices than for many years with a bigger market; a lower cost of production and greater profits. Then the satisfaction within one's self at having done something worth while for his country and for humanity is worth more than the profits.

What will be the extent of your success? You cannot be satisfied with yourself in these stirring times by watching in idleness the work of others.

A FISHING THEY WOULD GO AND FISH THEY WOULD GET

Local Nimrods Discover That There is Skill Required in Landing Trout, Also in Shooting a Loon--Accidents Will Happen Even to Fish--The Boys Did Get a Few

"I'll catch a fish this time, or I'll stay there all summer." So remarked Geo. Wall before he left with Dick Morrison and Bob Wall last Friday morning for the lake about three miles east of town, where the trout are so plentiful that one can almost put his hand in the water and take them out. But George and Bob had been out before and found it very difficult to secure a mess even with lines, fancy baits and ordinary hooks. It was also very annoying to them to see other fishermen haul in beautiful trout as fast as they could throw out their lines.

A hard tramp of several hours through as tangled a country as one wishes to travel, wet from the feet to the top of the hat, and hardly enough fish for one meal, is not inclined to swell one's head over his skill as an angler. On previous occasions George and Bob both had similar experiences, although they were presented with enough to make a creditable showing when they arrived home.

The last trip they were determined to catch fish. They took a tent, blankets, some grub, etc., and were prepared to stay until the fish were inclined to come to them. It was a very hard trip, especially with their big packs, but they got there and started to fish. It was a calm day and of course the boys had the wrong kind of tackle. The fish would jump all around them and come up in bunches and take a look and then disappear. Once in a while an accident happened and a trout got tangled up with the line and hooks, and by supper time they had caught between them enough for their one meal. There was none to take home so they resumed their task until near midnight and caught sufficient for breakfast. The night was a long, hard one, and the bed was harder still. Geo laid against a tree until his neck kinked. Bob got under the blankets, covered up his head and was dead to the world until morning when he discovered that he had slept on a root and couldn't straighten up. Dick had a root under his back, and with George he couldn't sleep, so they resumed their fishing about 3 a. m. Before he had breakfast George undertook to bathe in the lake, but the first plunge was such a shock that he nearly lost his life calling for assistance to get back on the raft. Dick just dipped his face and hands in the cool, clear water, but Bob wouldn't even take that chance. He filled his hat with water he reached from the shore put it on his head and as the water percolated through his curly tresses and trickled down his cheeks he wiped the cobwebs from his eyes, dried his hands and "let her go at that."

After breakfast Bob refused to fish any more. Twenty-four hours and only two fish—his time was worth more money. He took up the rifle and tried to get a loon, but the wily bird got next to him and every time Bob raised his rifle Mr. Loon ducked beneath the surface. "I'll fool you this time," said Bob, and kept his rifle poised ready to shoot as soon as the bird loomed up. The loon came up right in front of Bob's raft, squawked and disappeared. Bob was so unnerved that he almost overbalanced into the water. That ended Bob's fun. "Any old time a trout plays with me and a loon laughs at me—well, good-night." Henceforth Bob devoted himself to domestic affairs at the camp.

George and Dick stayed with the fishing all day, grabbing one occasionally. They say they ate between fifteen and twenty, but that may or may not be. It was late when they got home and the two family men had enough fish for the family breakfast, and as Dick had no family he had no fish.

It was really annoying to the boys who tried so hard, to watch a fisherman, who arrived the second day, pull in thirty trout

The Optimism of Advertising

A word that is frequently misused is "optimism." A man engaged in any business whatsoever who looks for success without exercising his faculties to achieve that end, is not an optimist, but a fool

Two things make advertising almost a synonym for optimism. One is that the advertiser who would be successful must be an optimist. The other is that when an advertiser loses his optimism he generally cancels his advertising.

"Business is rotten," exclaims the manufacturer, and forthwith orders all his advertising stopped, little realizing that his own action is one of the principal causes that makes business rotten.

Cancelling advertising is so easy that it is nearly always the first step toward retrenchment. The matter is seldom decided on its merits. It is impulse. Advertising must be an expense, the advertiser reasons. Therefore to cut it off effects a saving.

The stoppage of advertising in times of stress and change has two bad effects upon the business involved. It turns off immediately a method of securing new business and holding old business. In addition to that, it advertises the pessimistic views of the advertiser, and therefore spreads his own lack of faith in himself, his country, his goods, and the future to other business men who are perhaps on the verge of doing the same thing.

Without in any way minimizing the crisis which the world is now facing, without ignoring the fact that a long, expensive war in Europe will result in a great deterioration of values and a tremendous adjustment of finance and commerce when it is over, there is nevertheless sufficient ground for believing that this country is going on, that the manufacture and consumption of goods will continue, and that the manufacturers who are enterprising, far-sighted and alert enough to take advantage of existing and new markets and to push their business as they would in ordinary times, are going to benefit by their actions.

The point is that the war will either end everything in the world or it will not. If it does not, business, among other things, must go on. In our own country it must go on now. It cannot wait until the war is over.

The real Optimist is the man who hopefully faces conditions as they are

OVERHEARD AROUND NEW HAZELTON

School closes next week for the summer vacation.

Jas. Richmond was a business visitor in Rupert over the week end.

Bill Thompson and Bob Hadden came in from the Wonder group Saturday to spend a few days.

A beautiful piece of silver-lead ore came down from the Silver Bell group where Geo. T. Stewart is working. It is on exhibition in the Herald ore window.

J. E. Oppenheimer, who is located in Prince Rupert, paid a visit to the Rocher Deboile mine over the week end.

A party of eastern financial and mining men will visit New Hazelton shortly in quest of mining properties to operate or develop.

It is reported that a meeting of the school board will be held on July 10th for the purpose of electing a trustee to fill Mr. Crum's place and for other business.

John May was acquitted of the charge of murdering Bert Taylor last September. The second trial was held in Rupert last week. The jury decided in fifteen minutes that he was not guilty.

Fred Brewer spent a few days in town getting supplies. He is much encouraged with the result of the work they have been doing lately and he now sees some returns coming from their labor.

The C. P. R. Steamship Co. is now running its splendid coast steamers on the summer schedule making excellent connection at Prince Rupert with the trains. The C. P. R. service needs no comment—it is always the best. See the advertisement on another page in this issue.

Serving Bulkley Valley Fair

Secretary Beck of the Bulkley Valley Agricultural Society came to town on Wednesday. He is travelling through the district on his wheel in the interests of the big fair to be held at Telkwa. Mr. Beck has gone down the river to interview the farmers and on his return will spend a few days here.

Spelter Works For Canada

Steps should be taken by the Dominion and Provincial Governments for the establishment of spelter works in Canada. There is at present no market for Canadian zinc ores in the United States where the smelter works are filled up with supplies of their own ores and in consequence are not in the market for Canadian shipments. This has a serious effect upon mining in British Columbia where zinc products are now an important source of revenue to the silver-lead mines.

With such an active world demand for zinc, it is not in the interests of Canada that this condition should longer continue, and it is up to the governments to help in the establishment of such an important industry as a home spelter works capable of taking care of the zinc output of Canada.

Pay Streak in Omineca

It is stated that the Kildare Gold Mining Co., of Ottawa, has struck a rich placer ground in the Omineca and that they will make a big clean-up this year. It is also reported that a number of other companies will bring out a bunch of gold this fall.

The Potato

Everybody may think he or she knows the potato, but a perusal of Pamphlet No. 2, issued by the publication branch of the department of agriculture, Ottawa, upon the Solanum tuberosum, will convince the same he or she that there is much to learn. A reprint from the Agricultural Gazette, official mouthpiece of the department, the pamphlet is a collection of articles of superlative worth. Introduced by a brief historical statement showing the place the potato occupies in the world's domestic economy, and especially that of Canada, by which it would appear that the crop is worth to this country upwards of $41,500,000 a year, we are presented with a complete exposition of the cultivation of the tuber; the diseases to which the potato is subject and how to control them, and the results of inspection under the "Destructive Insect and Pest Act," etc.
